

HASHIT

Run No: 1673

Hare: Camouflage

Where: Bourke St

When: 24 September 2007

A respectably large pack of hashers showed up at Bourke St for my maiden run. All the usual suspects plus four virgins (although two lazy virgins chickened out of the run and ate my food instead).

It had been a rather windy afternoon which unfortunately caused some of the lime to blow away, making the trail a little hard to follow at times, but this did not bother Fireballs and Dude who were first back at the bucket and eager for beer. Garbo, who was running late, tried in vain to catch the pack, and the walkers balking at Missouri, made up half a trail of their own.

Back home many a friendly drink and chat were had by all. At one stage HandJob didn't draw breath long enough to be told which dish had no chilli. It was first in best dressed to get some food, due to my inability to estimate how hungry a hasher could be. Boom Box and Denco were too busy yacking and were forced to have a liquid diet instead.

DHOTW was given to me for having so much trouble with Gomer's crutch, and Elise and Toothy showed off their ability to down down.

Up Cumming Runs/Events

1675	8/10/2007	Dude	Matthews Rd, Downside
1676	15/10/2007	Milo	47 Nardoo St, Glenfield Park
1677	22/10/2007	The Brute	2 Gossett St, Wagga Wagga
Tour de Pisse	26 - 28 Oct 2007	Maybe Dude and Taxi? Doesn't really matter!!	Wagga Wagga - Wagga Wagga Beach - ask a local.
1678	29/10/07	Hooka	William Farrer Hotel

- Tour de Pisse - 26th to 28th October.
Wagga Wagga
- Canberra 2000th Run - 10th November.

Hash Trash

The Accident

A woman and a man are involved in a car accident; it's a bad one.

Both of their cars are totally demolished but amazingly neither of them is hurt.

After they crawl out of their cars, the woman says, "So you're a man. That's interesting. I'm a woman. Wow, just look at our cars!

There's nothing left, but we're unhurt. This must be a sign from God that we should meet and be friends and live together in peace for the rest of our days."

Flattered, the man replies, "Oh yes, I agree with you completely, this must be a sign from God!"

The woman continues, "And look at this, here's another miracle. My car is completely demolished but this bottle of wine didn't break.

Surely God wants us to drink this wine, celebrate our good fortune and see where the evening leads."

Then she hands the bottle to the man. The man nods his head in agreement, opens it and drinks half the bottle and then hands it back to the woman.

The woman takes the bottle and immediately puts the bottle aside the man asks, "Aren't you having any?" The woman replies, "No. I think I'll just wait for the police."

MORAL OF THE STORY:

Women are clever, evil bitches. Don't mess with them...

Bizarre News Stories of the Week

Chinese woman gives kiss of death

The Brisbane Times - September 27, 2007

SHANGHAI- A Chinese woman who killed her lover with a rat poison-laced kiss when she suspected him of being unfaithful has been sentenced to death, a newspaper said today.

Xia Xinfeng, from Maolou in the central province of Henan, passed a capsule with rat poison from her mouth to her long-time lover, Mao Ansheng, during a kiss, the Shanghai Daily said. Mao swallowed the capsule and died soon afterwards.

"The couple had said that if either one of them cheated on the other, he or she would have to die," the paper said in explaining the mouth-to-mouth assault. Xia found Mao had been "talking" with another woman, and deemed that he had broken their promise.

World's longest hangover

The Daily Telegraph - September 28, 2007

IT may be the longest hangover in the history of binge beer drinking. A Glasgow man downed 60 pints leaving him with a four-week super-hangover.

When a 37-year old man walked into a hospital emergency room in Glasgow, Scotland last October complaining of "wavy" vision and a non-stop headache that had lasted four weeks, doctors were at first stumped, the British journal The Lancet reported today.

The unnamed patient "had no history of head injury or loss of consciousness; his past medical record was unremarkable, and he was taking no medications," Zia Carrim and two other physicians from Southern General Hospital said in a case report.

Body temperature and blood pressure were both normal, and a neurological exam scanned negative. But when an eye specialist was called in, the fog began to clear, at least for the doctors.

The patient, said the ophthalmologist, had swollen optical discs, greatly enlarged blind spots and what eye doctors call "flame haemorrhages," or bleeding nerve fibres.

"We sought a more detailed history" from the patient, noted one named Zia. This is when the man revealed he had consumed 60 pints - roughly 35 litres - of beer over a four day period, following a domestic crisis.

Doctors believe severe dehydration, caused by the alcohol, led to a rare condition called cerebral venous sinus thrombosis (CVST). A scan of the brain's blood vessels confirmed the diagnosis.

CVST - which can cause seizures, impaired consciousness, loss of vision and neurological damage - strikes three or four people per million, mainly children, every year in Britain. The cause is generally unknown.

It took more than six months of long-term blood-thinning treatment to restore the man's normal vision - and to get rid of the headache, the doctors reported.